About the fees:

There is no difference between the price of the in person and the online fee. This is because we would like to have the hybrid event as integrated as possible, for which the technical support is costly.

Supporter fee: we thank those who choose this category having the financial possibility to support the low fees for trainees

Organisation fee: if the fee is paid by an organization not the participant, this is the fee to be paid

Bursaries: EGATIN offers bursaries of the fee for trainees. Please write to committee@egatin.net if you would like to receive a bursary

JCC Budapest Bálint Ház is the home of the Hungarian Jewish community. It gives place to various Jewish programs and non-Jewish programs as well, like the Hungarian Group Psychotherapeutic Association's conference.

It is situated in the city center close to the boulevard called Andrásy út, a couple of steps from the Hungarian State Opera House. The closest public transport stop is the Opera station of the Millennium Underground Railway, but it is also close to the city's major intersection Deák Ferenc tér.

Lodging

We offer different possibilities for lodging. You can indicate your preference in your registration. If you have any special needs, please contact us.

Hungarian colleagues: you have the possibility to stay as a guest of Hungarian colleagues without any cost. If you would like to save or would like to get to know better a Hungarian group analyst or trainee please choose this possibility.

Hotel Moments Budapest: four-star hotel 1 minute by walk from the venue. Can be booked before 21/03/2023. Price: 180 EUR/night.

About our title

The title and theme of 2023 EGATIN Study Days in Budapest reflect a wide possible range of current social-political and group analytic training processes. Although heritage seems to be something from the past the title is also constructive and forward-looking: we are interested in how heritage affects the present and the future. What we inherit can hold us back, but we can also draw strength from it and create something new.

Originally the 2023 EGATIN Study Days and AGM were to take place in Kiev. Knowing this, we agreed to organize this event with our political and social environment very much in our mind, in which heritage plays a significant role. This is also true for the organization of EGATIN: what kind of sustaining power does the heritage of the common past have in the challenges of the present?

CSAKIT, the organizing institute is experiencing a growing, evolving, self-reflective phase, where many innovations have been introduced and are constantly being introduced, but we are also aware of being influenced by the institute's past. In the life of associations and trainings transgenerational theme plays an important role. Transgenerational themes are also something we must train our trainees to be able to work with in their groups.

How can a trainee or trained group analyst notice in a group when a buried heritage is resurrecting? How can you train for this?

What processes lead to traumas and intergroup conflicts becoming unprocessed, can they be buried? How do they stay in the matrix of the group and society, how they affect the institutes' training cultures or even the method we train? What do we – trainers, trainees, citizens – do in the present that will become a legacy for the next generations? What factors decides what becomes a heritage in training?

We invite you to take part on searching for these answers and continue to create the future heritage of EGATIN together.
